Hopefuls court regional voters

Clinton goes West, Bush loses Dixie

Associated Press

Clinton panned for electoral in the West on Wednesday, while traditionally Republican voters a "new Democratic party" rather than the tax-and-spend policies of the past. President Bush edged his young rival to a "struggle" Little League manager" not far from the Oval Office.

Clinton's presidency in peril, Bush was at point blank if anyone had him his re-election race was badly lost. "Not anybody I trust," Clinton replied to his CNN interviewer. "But anyone I trust," he added for emphasis.

With less than two weeks remaining until Election Day, it wasn't so much what the candidates said counted; it was where they counted.

Clinton's chartered jet was touched down in Colorado, Wyoming, Montana as he bid for victory in the region of the country that has elected a Republican each year since 1964.

In contrast, Bush had his ticket landed aboard a chartered train in North Carolina, a state where Republicans usually have locked up the race for the White House.

Clinton's Perot was back home in Texas, pursuing his independent, now-familiar unconventional campaign. His campaign has purchased 30-minute network slots for commercials today, Friday and Saturday.

Clinton's political back and forth, the polls made Clinton the underdog nationally by roughly 15 percentage points. Both sides were vying closely for new figures to determine whether Bush had gained from aggressive performance in the final presidential debate last night.

Clinton expressed satisfaction he had articulated sharp differences with Clinton over leadership, character and taxes, and the president spent his day in North Carolina stressing them.

Clinton had been "pathetic" when it came to deciding whether to commit forces to a Gulf War, expressing both support and opposition.

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton, who holds a substantial lead in the polls, talks with the media in Williamsburg, Va. before leaving for the Oct. 15 Richmond, Va. debate.

Polls say 'Pres.' Clinton; but Bush win not ruled out

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton is ahead in so many states that the 1992 election seems to be shaping up as a landslide. But wait.

President Bush is furiously trying to solidify support in states that backed him in the past. And presidential races have a tradition of tightening up in the final days.

And then there's the question of what impact Ross Perot's independent candidacy will have in close states. There's no generally accepted definition of a landslide in a three-way race.

"A landslide in a presidential race is an ambiguous thing ... except that, like pornography, you know it when you see it," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist.

Generally, political analysts and operatives agree, any margin over 55 percent in the popular vote and/or 350 of the 538 votes in the Electoral College signifies a landslide.

Ronald Reagan won a clear landslide victory in 1980 over President Carter — with only 51 percent of the popular vote. But he got 489 electoral votes to Carter's 49.

In 1988, Bush buried Democrat Michael Dukakis by a 426-111 margin in the Electoral College, and with a 54 percent to 46 percent popular-vote margin.

By any account, the polling numbers 13 days before this year's election point to a resounding Clinton electoral victory.

The Arkansas governor is ahead in polls in dozens of states, including many where Republicans usually coast to victory. Bush is ahead only in a handful.

But analysts like to add a caveat: It's been a year of shifting loyalties and of surprises.

"It's too early. There's still too much time and too much uncertainty to call it a landslide," said Democratic pollster Peter Hart.

BYU counselors outline keys for successful, happy marriages

Editor's Note: This is the second part of a series on marriage. In the first part, general divorce trends, a BYU student's experience and Utah divorce statistics were discussed. Although divorce rates in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are considerably lower than the national average, these rates are climbing. One statistic from Wednesday's needs clarification. Abandonment is projected to drop 6 percent in the '80s and '90s. That, combined with the projected divorce rate of 56 percent would drop to 62 percent.

BRIAN KAGEL
Reporter

Possible Reasons

Anglas Brinley, a Ph.D. in family studies and an associate professor in religion, said he thinks for a mission is critical in making a marriage work. "When you get a couple where both served missions, they have the potential to be extremely strong and successful. They both should have a vision of marriage as well as the necessary people skills," he said.

Brinley and Brent Barlow, a BYU marriage and family therapist, agree timing is critical. "When you are making a decision as critical as marriage, take your time. Give it at least a few months, take the time you need," Barlow said.

Brinley said many couples may wait too long to have children. "In many cases selfishness, debt and careers can negatively influence a couple's happiness. The prophets have counseled us to start our families while we are young. Sometimes a couple moves their standard of living with two incomes to a point that they decide they can't afford children."

Everyone thinks that counseling is the solution to marriage problems. It can be expensive, and if each person is not willing to make some changes, it may be a waste. It takes two people to make a marriage successful or fail," said Brinley.

"One of the benefits of counseling," Brinley conceded, "is that usually a couple, who may be emotional and unwilling to work through a problem at home, will not try to 'escape' in front of the counselor. A good counselor can help a couple work through their own problems. A counselor can act as an objective third party and ask sometimes difficult questions that need to be answered and point out patterns that are destroying the relationship," he said.

Barlow said BYU students are lucky because counseling is on the whole good and inexpensive or free at BYU. "Away from BYU it can cost as much as $80 - $100 dollars or more an hour." He said it is important that couples with problems get help early.

Possible Solutions

Brinley is convinced that at the root of every divorce is selfishness. "The Book of Mormon warns that when you have too much leisure time, material goods, prosperity and political freedom, you get a soft generation that doesn't know how to work out their problems; they worry about themselves," he said.

Brinley also indicated rigid role expectations and being insensitive to the needs of each other can hurt marriages. "Some men have the attitude that if you have a good meal, frequent sex, and then watch a ball game, marriage is great. Women usually expect more from their husbands — like companionship, help with the children, some housekeeping help, and a desire to keep romance in the marriage," he said.

While Barlow concedes that divorce tends to run in families, he said it may have the opposite effect on some. "It may be that some children saw their parents go through (a divorce), and it didn't seem too bad, so they go into marriage thinking they have an 'escape clause.' At the same time you also have some who are weary of marriage after seeing divorce at home, so they enter relationships with guarded skepticism," he said.

BYU departs for 'legendary' field

Cougars not intimidated by Irish mystique, Knute Rockne as big game arrives

By TAD WALCH
Sports Editor

BYU's football team leaves Provo today for Indiana and a shot at Notre Dame on the field that Knute Rockne built.

After a 12:30 p.m. practice and a 3:00 p.m. team meal, the Cougars leave for South Bend to begin what adds up to more than just a two-week diversion from the WAC schedule. A road battle against the most famous team in college football history this Saturday will be followed by a home contest with Penn State next week.

BYU promises not to be intimidated by the spirits of Notre Dame teams past, but as head coach LaVell Edwards pointed out, BYU will have its hands full with this year's Irish team, which sports the nation's best offense (486.3 yards per game).

Playing the Fighting Irish is an honor not bestowed on many teams. A game with Notre Dame can signal two things: the Irish need an easy early season victory or your program has arrived.

BYU is the latter. "We are grateful to have built the program to a level that we can play games like these," Edwards said. "It fits in with playing Miami, UCLA and Penn State."

Notre Dame (4-1-1) has been favored by 20 points all week long, but reports from South Bend say the "Killer B's" may be hamstrung. Running backs Reggie Brooks (109.5), Jerome Bettis (88.2) and Lee Becton (42.2) have combined to average 239.9 rushing yards per game and have 16 touchdowns between them, but Brooks pulled a groin muscle this week and Becton is having hamstring problems.

Both are listed as questionable against BYU, which is ranked 19th in the nation in rushing defense. "They won't be able to practice for a couple of days, and when you can't practice, you don't play as well," said Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz said.

Even with such a potent running attack intact, Notre Dame has struggled to preserve its No. 10 national ranking. A preseason Heisman hopeful, quarterback Rick Mirer has been a disappointment.

His pass efficiency rating jumped to 124.6 after Notre Dame's last game, a 52-21 win over Pittsburgh Oct. 10, when he was 9-16 passing for 182 yards, no interceptions and two touchdowns.

He has thrown for more than 200 yards just once and has completed just 46 percent of his passes.

But Mirer enjoys great pass protection — he's been sacked just five times. BYU, with 23 sacks, will try to get to Mirer while attempting to contain Bettis and whoever else is left standing in the Irish backfield.

BYU, which sports the nation's second-best overall (476.8 yards per game) and passing (338.4) offenses, will try to improve on that. Led by sophomore quarterback Ryan Hancock, whose 161.8 pass efficiency rating is the highest in the nation, the Cougars hope their big-play capability will keep them in the game.

UNIVERSALS — Hancock will be making only his fourth career start. ... He has completed 80 of 138 passes for 1,448 yards and nine touchdowns. ... Freshman receiver Derrick Mayes has caught just three passes for Notre Dame this season, but all three were for touchdowns — of 31, 38 and 69 yards.

Budget problems plague custodial staff this year

By CHARLIE GIDDLEY
Senior Reporter

The party is over at "Disneyland."

BYU, so nicknamed by university custodial directors nationwide for its cleanliness, may not be able to maintain its reputation this year if the Department of Custodial Services isn't able to cope with a serious budget problem.

When it first became aware of the snafu in September, the department realized money could run out as soon as January — less than halfway through the fiscal year, said Don Wood, administrative supervisor.

"There was a change in the budgeting procedure, and it didn't meet with the current needs of what our cleaning responsibilities are and the number of students we had hired," Wood said. "So this year, we're going to have to cinch our belt."

Unfortunately, some students felt that belt cinch around them instead of the department. A full staff had been hired when the budget problem was discovered.

At the beginning of October, the student custodial hours in one area were cut from 20 to 15 per week. Some experienced involuntary reassignment to other shifts, on top of the cut in hours. In another area a student was fired.

Area supervisors were responsible for these actions, however, which were forbidden at a meeting in September, Wood said.

The actions have been reversed — most of them this week. "We didn't want to balance the budget on the backs of the students," Wood said.

To deal with the budget shortage, the department has put a hold on all hiring, is encouraging area supervisors to transfer students from some areas to others — changing students' shifts only when they agree to it — and asking for volunteers to switch from 20 hours to 15, Wood said.

The department counts on natural attrition to reduce the number of employees, Wood said. But the staff may be struggling to keep up by the end of the fiscal year.

Dee Shirts, the area supervisor who cut hours, said he could see no other fair way to deal with the problem. "I groaned over it for a week," said Shirts.

Shirts' Area 60 was hit hardest by the budget crunch because the custodial administration decided it had been allotted too many man-hours in the past. Area 60's allotment was cut and distributed to other areas.

At first Shirts asked for volunteers to reduce their hours. Not enough volunteered, so Shirts reduced everyone's hours. "I overreacted."

"In order for me to stay within the numbers they've given me, I felt that was the most fair thing to do for everyone — treat everyone the same," Shirts said.

The budget problem stems from a change in the budgeting procedure and from the fact that the 25 percent of newly hired custodians who normally quit during the first few weeks of a semester haven't quit this year, Wood said.

"Last year we changed from student bodies to dollars," Wood said. "When it came down to matching our dollars and budget with the personnel that we had already hired, the two didn't mesh."

Miscommunication was also a factor. Since the department went over budget last year, Wood told supervisors to cut hiring this year to the levels of "a year ago," he said. "They thought I was talking about '91-'92, and I was referring to '90-'91."

People may start noticing a little dust around campus this year, Wood said. "We hope the (cleaning standard) won't drop, but the reality is that it might."

Orton resists Demo label

Candidate avoids party politics

By MATTHEW S. FRANK
Universe Staff Writer

Congressman Bill Orton, of Utah's 3rd District, represents something of a phenomenon — a Democrat representing one of the most Republican districts in the nation. While he is quick to call himself a "conservative Democrat," the first-term legislator says he resents labels and believes in practicing nonpartisan politics.

The 44-year-old representative, who was unavailable for an interview with the Daily Universe, said in a KUTV debate Sunday he was frustrated with an inefficient gridlocked government which "places political interests above the needs of the electorate." He said he steers clear of party politics by analyzing each bill according to how it would affect his district, then voting for his constituents rather than for his party.

"Partisanship is a big part of the problem in Washington," he said at a ceremony for the signing of one of his education bills in July. "I would rather avoid partisanship in order to be part of the solution to the nation's problems."

Orton prescribes his method of leadership to all of Washington to overcome a slugging economy. "I believe that actual differences between the two parties over proposals for economic growth are narrow, and should be overcome by our duty to serve the public," he said in his statement on economic growth. "In fact, I was the only member of Congress to support both the Republican and the Democratic economic growth proposals."

Indeed Orton's lists of endorsements, including ones from the National Rifle Association and the National Right to Life Committee, shows he often deviates from the Democratic Party platform. In fact, if it weren't for his stand in favor of union labor, his opponent, Republican Richard Harrington, would find few issues on which he could differ.

Orton has supported bills which strengthen the role of labor organizations in the interests of increasing wages. In Sunday's debate he said labor costs are not the source of difficulties for large businesses.

Even with his support of union labor, Orton favors a positive relationship between business and government, unlike the animosity that he says Democrats have at times harbored in the past. In Sunday's debate he said while 40 percent of PAC money he receives comes from labor, even more funds come from big business. Orton said Congress must support both groups if they hope to strengthen the economy.

In his first term, Orton has focused his efforts on the economy, serving on several financial committees such as the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee and Small Business Committee, as well as several economic subcommittees. He also currently serves as chair of the Conservative Democratic Forum Task Force on Tax and Budget.

Despite criticism from his opponent that he is "out of touch with voters" and has been "swallowed up by politics," Orton says he does all he can to stay in contact with citizens from the 3rd District.

He told a group of BYU students in July he makes every effort to visit the district each weekend Congress is in session, conducting town meetings and getting in tune with the concerns of voters.

Utah's future bright, economist says

SALT LAKE CITY — Despite an anemic national economy, Utah's business climate should continue to prosper well into the New Year, First Security Bank's chief economist says.

In the corporation's quarterly economic newsletter, Insights, released Wednesday, Kelly Matthews wrote that 1993's outlook "reflects the diverse and nonpeculative factors that have sustained rapid economic growth over the past four years."

During the period 1988-92, Utah ranked third nationally with an annual job growth rate of 3.7 percent. Meantime, population growth in 1992 will probably top 2 percent, reaching 1.8 million, thanks to "significant net in-migration," Matthews said.

During the current year, total personal income gains in Utah should at least duplicate the 6.3 percent rise recorded in 1991. The first quarter's income gain of 6 percent was sixth-highest nationally, and well above the national average of 4.1 percent.

Utah's Index of Leading Economic Indicators dipped abruptly in August, down to 171.6, the lowest level since February.

Job growth has held stable in Utah during the year's first three quarters, increasing by 20,000 jobs, or 2.6 percent.

224 frost-free days set Utah record

SALT LAKE CITY — Wednesday marked a record for the longest period in northern Utah's weather history without frost — 224 days.

The record was registered at Salt Lake International Airport's National Weather Service office.

Wednesday morning's low at the airport didn't even approach freezing. It was a record-tying 52 degrees at 7 a.m., matching the high minimum temperature set Oct. 21, 1989.

The 224 days started on March 12 and shattered the old mark of 223 consecutive frost-free days from March 30 to Nov. 8, 1985.

The lowest temperature since March 12 was just last week when the mercury hit 35 degrees on Oct. 15. The latest day ever recorded with out freezing temperatures was Nov. 14, 1988.

London train bombed by IRA; 3 injured

LONDON — An explosion damaged a train in north London Wednesday evening, injuring three passengers, shortly after the IRA issued a statement accusing police of having ignored its earlier warning about the bomb.

A second blast was reported about four hours later near a Territorial Army center in west London, the Fire Brigade said. There was no immediate report of injuries.

The Territorial Army is a part-time, volunteer reserve force. The first blast came around 4:30 p.m. on a bridge near the Silver Street station, between Liverpool Street station and Cambridge.

In the statement issued to a news agency in Dublin an hour before the blast, the IRA said: "In spite of repeated phone calls to a number of London radio stations, British police have made no effort to act on authenticated warnings that our volunteers have left a bomb on the rail line..."

Prescription drugs cheaper in Canada

WASHINGTON — Prescription drugs cost an average of 32 percent more in the United States than in Canada, according to a congressional study released yesterday.

The difference in manufacturers' prices is due not to variations in the drug makers' costs, but rather to Canadian government programs that use mass buying power and regulation to limit prescription prices, the study said.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, surveyed manufacturers' prices for 121 of the most frequently prescribed drugs. While a few drugs were cheaper in the United States, most were substantially more expensive.

One drug used for control of angina cost more than nine times as much in the United States as in Canada. Antibiotics, pain relievers, birth control pills, anti-depressants and other preparations were among those that cost more.

"Once again, the United States is behind the rest of the world in providing affordable health care to our people," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who asked the GAO for the study.

Provo 5th highest in pollution levels

By KAREEN JOHNSTON
Universe Staff Writer

Wasatch Front air quality continues to exceed national standards for carbon monoxide and particulates, according to the latest pollution trends report released this week by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The Provo-Orem area had the fifth-highest level of carbon monoxide and particulates in the nation for 1991, according to the EPA report. Although this is considerably lower than the year before, when the Wasatch Front led the nation in air pollution, the area still has a long way to go to come within the national air quality standards, said Larry Svoboda, EPA air section chief.

One of the programs that should help show signs of improvement for next year's report is the use of oxygenated fuels this winter, Svoboda said. The oxygenated fuel will help the EPA and local authorities analyze how much of the pollution problem is contributed by motor vehicles.

Oxygenated fuel has lowered carbon monoxide levels by about 20 percent in Denver and Phoenix, said Terry Beebe, bureau director of Air Quality in Utah County. He said similar results should occur in Provo.

All fuel sold in Utah County after Oct. 31 will be oxygenated, Beebe said. Gas prices will probably not increase more than a couple of cents, he said.

The EPA releases the trends report once a year. The report describes how the country is doing in meeting the national air quality standards for six basic pollutants: carbon monoxide, ozone, small particulates (PM10), nitrogen dioxide, sulfur dioxide and lead.

The annual data tends to give a clearer picture of how an area is doing than any single reading or even a season's tracking of pollution, Svoboda said.

The Wasatch Front is still considered a nonattainment area for carbon monoxide, Svoboda said. The national standard for carbon monoxide found in the air, according to the Clean Air Act, should not exceed nine. In 1990, Provo exceeded this level 11 times, and in 1991 the level was exceeded six times, according to the report.

It also seems that some are getting married when they are unprepared, getting married too young, and getting married too fast. "Those 72-hour first date to engagements that you hear about around here are terrifying to me."

"When we are losing 7 percent of our marriages in the first year, it would appear that some just aren't ready for it. Some get discouraged quickly when things aren't perfect," Barlow said.

The national median age for first marriages is about 23.6 for women and 26.7 for men.

Another commonly debated situation is mothers who work. Statistics show that more than 90 percent of married women can expect to be employed at some time during married life. Brinley believes the central issue in a mother's happiness is whether she has a choice in staying home or working.

The Family's Future

Divorce became a much quicker process for some Utah residents this summer. Beginning July 1, a new law was passed that gives residents of Utah and Salt Lake County the choice to forgo the usual three-month waiting period before divorce court. The couple must attend a two-hour, $27 counseling course, attorney Brent Young said.

Situations like that could hasten trends. Barlow said many believe divorce is redefining what a "family" is. "Today we have reconstituted or blended families, single-mother families are rapidly rising, and single-father families, once only 10 percent, are becoming more common ... the traditional two-parent first-parent family could be a minority," he said.

Nonetheless, Barlow said he believes there has never been a better time for marriage. "The rigid male-centered marriage of the past few hundred years will not survive during the next decade or into the 21st century. A marital relationship, to survive in the future, must be built not on superiority, but on equality, mutual responsibility, security, and dignity."

Marci Beeke also contributed to this article.

CAMPUS

Help fight poverty, students told at forum

By SUZANNE HOGGE
Universe Staff Writer

More than 39,000 people in Utah County are below the poverty line, said the executive director of Community Action, a community-based organization. As part of Poverty Awareness Week, BYU sponsored a forum on local poverty issues Wednesday.

Poverty is defined as not being able to provide for basic necessities such as food, housing and medical care. For a family of four, poverty is those making $14,300 or less, said Myla Dutton of Community Action.

Ginny Lakey, formerly homeless, said people often form judgments about families or individuals who "...Simply just providing a box of food or band-aiding the problem is not doing anything..."

—Myla Dutton,
Community Action

are either homeless or relying on welfare. "I had had a lot of problems here (Utah) ... we have this concept here that if you are doing good, you don't need the system, and it's those who are not trying that are there," Lakey said.

"We rarely see anyone that is out to use the system," Dutton said.

Most of the job openings in Utah Valley are entry-level positions that require a high educational level, Dutton said. Many of the unemployed are illiterate, she said.

"Most programs today, just as we do with our food pantry and sheltering programs, look to the long term. We realized at human services that simply just providing a box of food or band-aiding the problem is not doing anything. It can actually result in someone becoming dependent on you," Dutton said.

Dutton challenged students to become aware of poverty issues and become involved in organizations that help the homeless and low-income families.

Community Action is requesting that individuals or organizations help furnish a new facility to be used as temporary housing for homeless families. By providing furniture, decorations and necessities for the room, students and organizations can "adopt" a part of the facility. For more information call 373-8200.

BYU professor studies Utes' ancestors, ancient remains found at local sites

By CLAUDIA ARUGETA
Universe Staff Writer

A BYU anthropology professor is doing archeological work to learn about the hunters and gatherers who inhabited Utah Valley about 400 years before Mormon colonization.

Joel Janetski, assistant professor of anthropology and director of the Museum of Peoples and Cultures, said little is known about these people, who are suspected to be the ancestors of the Ute Indians.

"The history of the Ute people is as important as our own history," Janetski said.

John Hawkins, chair of the Anthropology Department, said it is important to understand how others lived in our environment. "We need to find out what people did so we don't repeat their mistakes," he said.

Janetski wrote an ethnohistory about these people based on journals and written records. He wants to verify his accounts.

"We can understand the lifestyle by testing my model with the archeological evidence," Janetski said. He has been excavating sites of pits and hearths around Utah Lake since 1985.

The hearths, used for cooking, provide charcoal used to carbonate the sites, Janetski said. Most sites date to the 1600's, he said.

The pits, the largest of which are three feet deep and several feet across, were used for storage or trash disposal, Janetski said. Those used to deposit trash contain animal bones, tools, arrow heads and ceramic pieces, he said.

These remains give some indication of the diet and lifestyle of these people, Janetski said.

The large amount of fish bones found suggests the importance of the lake as a food source, Janetski said. "Utah Lake once was a healthy lake with lots of fish," he said. These bones indicate that cutthroats, trout and chubs, no longer extant in the lake, once flourished, Janetski said.

He said, "Learning about these people helps us understand the ecology of the valley and our own impact on it. These people lived in balance with the world and didn't alter it the way we have."

Janetski said he hopes his research will identify this groups' ancestors and descendants. He said he wants to know if they are related to the Fremont culture, which inhabited much of Utah from about 800 to 1300 B.C., or if they migrated from another area.

Community Service Center of BYUSA, located fourth floor of the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center, aid to better coordinate and serve the community and BYUSA.

A of a service center developed when the Life administration perceived the need to the BYUSA's services. The Center was in the stages for a year and began to function in our goal is to get everyone involved in service, early with BYUSA, within any service that them, so they can expand their horizons," Edgmon, 22, executive director of community and a psychology major from Bountiful.

Community Service Center of BYUSA is similar volunteer Center at United Way. Eventually a link-up will allow the two centers to community share information about community needs. ge will assist the Community Service Center in targeting the places where the needs are the greatest and in placing volunteers where they are needed, said Bill Hulterstrom, executive director of United Way.

"BYU students have been involved for decades, involved in caring for the community. As the community gets larger, there becomes a need to become a little more sophisticated, and work to avoid duplication and to target energies. That's what this partnership (between the Community Service Center and United Way) accomplishes," Hulterstrom said.

The primary purposes of the Community Service Center are research and coordination.

The Center will research the needs of the community, state and nation. The research will supply the information needed to evaluate whether current needs are being met by service projects.

The coordination aspect of the Center will enable groups to work together to avoid duplication of service projects.

Why Dennis Olcott took Independent Study:

BYU's Independent Study program was great. It allowed me to take classes during summers that otherwise would have delayed my graduation. The classes were all very well organized, especially the manuals from the instructors. I was also surprised how much care the teachers took in writing notes and special insights on my assignments.

Weapons embargo doesn't help Bosnia

The time has come for the United States to make good its call for "a new world order." This call is just a pile of empty words without moral and financial backing for a war-strewn Yugoslavia. The way to give this support is not in U.S. troops, but by lifting the United Nations' weapons embargo on Yugoslavia.

Since the rule of the iron-fist has crumbled in Yugoslavia, civil war between the Serbians, Bosnians and Croats has claimed at least 14,000 lives, with 50,000 more missing. Foreign Relations member Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., has put a name on the bloodshed saying, "What we have, is a 'New World Disorder.' There's no foreign policy to back up the phrase 'New World Order.'" Biden chaired a Foreign Relations hearing on June 11 to discuss military involvement in Yugoslavia.

The U.N. placed the weapons embargo on Yugoslavia in May in an effort to stop the fighting. The embargo, however, has not punished the Serbians, who are fighting to ruthlessly take over more land. It has instead hurt the democratic Bosnians, who do not have the means to protect themselves. The Serbs control the weapons from what used to be the Yugoslavian federal army, as well as all weapon-making factories. The embargo, rather than protesting the war, is greatly slanting it in favor of the communist Serbian government.

It is not just far-away Bosnians asking for help either. One thousand Utah Muslims marched through downtown Salt Lake Friday as a call for an international effort to end the violence. In addition, they asked for Utahns to pressure the U.N. into lifting the weapons embargo.

As with any war, there is no clear-cut line between good-guy and bad-guy. Many Serbians also want peace and have rallied for President Slobodan Milosevic to resign. One such rally was held in Belgrade on June 28, in which an estimated 400,000 protestors attended. June 28 marked the anniversary of the Serbian nation's loss to the Turks in the battle of Kosovo in 1389. Prince Alexander, the son of Yugoslavia's last king, attended the rally and explained why they celebrate this defeat. He said, "We turned a defeat into a moral victory. We proved that we know how to die, but we have had enough dying. We all know what needs to be done, and it should be done without bloodshed."

Vuk Draskovic, a 44-year-old writer and lawyer said, "We expect our rally will mark the beginning of the end of Communist rule and a new and better time for Serbs, for Serbia and for Europe."

Colonel Jovan Duijak, deputy commander of the Bosnian government forces said, "Tell America, we know it's difficult for them, and it's not their war. But let them know that we're facing tanks and artillery with pistols, and that if they'd just send us some rifles, we'd accept."

America can do better than just sending some rifles for people struggling to preserve democracy. He's right, this isn't our war, but we are obligated to help any people fighting for democracy. President Bush said, "We're not the world's policeman." Helping small democracies has gotten the United States into trouble before in conflicts such as the Vietnam War. That is why troops should not be sent. However, sending weapons or the means to obtain them is a way to advance democracy and stop the atrocities of war without becoming personally entangled in the conflict.

There are enough people on both sides who want to end the bloodshed. Therefore, by ending the embargo we can tip the scales in the favor of democracy and bring the war-torn region to a position where peace negotiations are possible.

Legalized gambling in Utah could carry hidden costs

It is my understanding that, in your upcoming election, the people of Utah will be voting on a proposition to bring gambling into the state. I haven't heard the details as to how Utah will use the money this gambling will bring to your state, but my advice is: Vote against any kind of gambling coming into your state.

Gambling does not help defray state expenses. It only causes problems. For example, the voters in Michigan were led to believe that they could improve their school systems by bringing Lotto games into their state. They were led to believe the money the state would earn from the Lotto games would be added to Michigan's General Educational Fund. The voters were conned into believing that gambling would be a "god-send" for their already problem-plagued schools. They voted for the Lotto.

Not long after this election, the Michigan State Legislature decided that the Lotto earnings were enough for the schools, so they voted to use the state's General Educational Fund for other state expenses — thereby wiping out the fund for their schools. At present the schools in Michigan rely mostly on Lotto earnings to pay for their educational expenses, and these earnings are less than what the General Educational Fund had been. Financially, the schools are worse off than before gambling entered the state of Michigan. Needless to say, the Michigan people regret voting for the Lotto games.

Gambling in California

The story is much the same in California. Like the people in Michigan, Californians were led to believe that the schools would greatly benefit from money that Lotto games would earn. This has not been the case. The schools in California are in deep financial trouble. Last year the sales of Lotto tickets were down, so the Lotto Commission had to come up with new games to encourage the sale of more Lotto tickets. To accomplish this, the commission needed to enlarge the prize money. This caused the Lotto Commission to decrease the amount of money going to the schools. Because of this decrease, the State Education Department was forced to make cuts from school budgets. Some of the cuts have serious drawbacks.

One such cut is driver education classes in the high schools. In California the majority of people drive anywhere from 30 to 80 miles to their places of work, making California a "commuter state." For this reason, it makes driver education very important and vital to California, but it has been cut from a large majority of California's schools. The schools that have saved their driver education programs are forced to charge the students large fees.

Driver education is only one of the many cuts the schools have been forced to make, and budget cutbacks still continue. Some school districts are so desperate that many of the teachers' salaries have been cut.

Social problems

But education is only a small part of the problems that gambling has brought to California. Gambling also causes social/personal problems. I heard a young, single mother brag that she spent $75 of her family's food money for Lotto tickets.

She had previously budgeted the money for two weeks' supply of food and was only going to buy $5 worth of tickets. But when she discovered the prize money was worth millions, she decided to increase her chances by putting all her food money into the Lotto. She didn't win a penny. When asked how her family survived for two weeks without having money for food, she replied, "Oh, I borrowed money and food from my parents, friends and neighbors — anywhere I could get food to carry my family over until my next payday." When asked if it was worth putting that much money into Lotto tickets, she replied that it was. She also added that she would do it again on another chance of winning millions in the Lotto game.

These examples are only some of the problems I have discovered with state gambling games. California and Michigan are not the only states with financial and social problems resulting from gambling games. And it isn't only Lotto games that cause problems. I have seen problems existing in all gambling games — large or small. It also costs these states extra law-enforcement money to police the gambling laws. Plus no matter how much people claim they have the self-control needed to gamble "honestly"; there is something in gambling games that brings out the greed in people who would probably never consider themselves to be greedy. So Utah voters — be extremely careful. Think thoroughly about this proposition before you vote for gambling in your state.

It is a sad state of affairs when our country, government and people feel they need to rely on gambling to "pay the bills."

Political Type

Political ads, ad nauseam

else, you can pick your favorite ads. Here are mine:

Whenever I see one of those "Bob Bennett is planning on cutting Social Security" commercials, it depresses me. Wayne Owens has got to be able to do better than this. Such ads feature no discussion on the wisdom of Bennett's ideas; they're just straight-forward political hack-and-scare.

Owens' latest attacks are better: nailing Bennett for his involvement in Watergate. For those of you who don't know, Bennett was your typical Washington-big business insider 20 years ago. Along with occasional wire-tapping and setting up bogus corporations to allow rich Republicans to donate money to Richard Nixon tax-free, he was accused of passing money and legal protection to E. Howard Hunt, one of the Watergate criminals convicted and sent to prison. But unfortunately, Owens is too much of an insider himself to look sincere when he criticizes Washingtonian excess. Plus, what if Bennett goes on TV and says, "I've repented"? Owens, a former mission president, would have to respect that.

Bennett's ads rock. Minimal dialogue, black and white backdrops, Bennett's strangely frightening face leering right at you. Too bad what he says is pure nonsense. How much courage does it take for a candidate to stare into the camera and say he opposes taxes three times anyway? Do you think you're more convincing and charismatic when you repeat yourself, Bob? Try Gordon Jump instead.

The governor's race has been wonderful. Merrill Cook, as benefits an Independent candidate with no money, keeps filming himself speed skating, or laying all bandaged up in a hospital bed. Theoretically all this has something to do with Utah politics (spending money on the Olympics and health care, respectively), but the connection is never very clear. Mike Leavitt's commercials are a creation of the same Institute of Warm Mormon Fuzzies responsible for Joe Cannon's balloon. Mike comes off as such a soft-spoken, well-meaning individual, I can't help but wonder: Why does he keep telling us about his poor neighbor who lost his farm years ago because he mortgaged correctly? I can see the tune follow in the soup line now fiscal foolishness cost me my family home, but I gave Leavitt a great T commercial."

Stewart Hanson's commercials take cake, though. Out in the middle field, under a tree, talking about future with a bunch a street-people sitting cross-legged around him with the theme to "Cinema Paradiso" in the background. What is this Heavenly Father's Plan? I think it is a wonderful human being, but master he's not. Try more issues, S.

The Third District Congressional being pretty small, hasn't had a opportunity for advertising excess. It is nice to see Bill Orton finally get around to advertising (R Harrington has only been at it for months now already). Unfortunately spin doctors decided to actually stare straight at the camera, makes him look kind of like a fish. It was a nice commercial. Harrington commercials are better though: he have gotten one of his daughter's to come over and wait away on the while he spoke into the microphone never would have thought Harrington and rock music would mix. But never put anything past a man who a horse in public buildings.

Waffling

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the article in the Oct. 13 issue concerning the different political candidates' views on abortion. In that article, Representative Wayne Owens is quoted as saying, "I oppose abortion except in the cases of rape, incest or threat to the health of the mother. All of my votes in Congress are consistent with that position. I have supported federal funding for poor women in the foregoing circumstances. I do not support the Freedom of Choice Act." That quote is patently false.

I am tired of the dishonesty and hypocrisy among some of our political "leaders." In a letter dated Feb. 6, 1992, Rep. Owens received praise from the Hollywood Women's Political Committee which says in part, "We are pleased to announce that based on your 100% Pro-Choice voting record in Congress since 1989, you have been included in the Hollywood Women's Political Committee Pro-Choice Honor Roll." It also states, "Your 100% Pro-Choice voting record is critical to the future of Choice in this country." Also, in a letter dated Friday, March 6, 1992, Rep. Owens is mentioned as the co-sponsor of the federal gay and lesbian, civil rights bill — HR 1430. In the same letter, the Gay and Lesbian Utah Democrats Co-Chair, Dale Sorenson, states, "Rep. Owens has been Utah's strongest voice on Capitol Hill for Gay and Lesbian Issues."

Let us not be deceived by the dishonesty of some of those who are seeking our vote. The future of this great country depends on how and when we respond to these issues.

Lacking diversity

To the editor:

When I came to BYU about two years ago I was told that I would find great diversity and that I would be around people with common beliefs and common interests. Instead I find that if I don't look like I just walked out of a J. Crew catalog, people are prone to buzz and whisper about me (with-in earshot) after they pass me on the street or sidewalk. They would like to discuss my chastity, tithe paying or if I should see my bishop or not.

My clothes are modest — they cover the proper body parts — my hair is short and in my free time on campus I choose to dress how I please. I don't ask anyone else about their morality or praying habits or anything else because that is not my business. My business is to do good to people I meet, my business is to take care of my own salvation. But God is not going to save you or me on account of the fact that we shop at ZCMI.

I am tired of being hated because I look different. I had hoped to find diversity at BYU but all I have found are Mormons, a few LDS people and even fewer true Christians. This Christ-like attitude applies to everyone — including diverse white people. I am white. I come from a place where diversity hits everyone. Here, if you are white then you are expected to be like all the rest of the white people — white bread, sheltered, spoiled, bigoted, shiny and happy and always dressed the part — right? Wrong.

Look a little deeper

To the editor:

I am very concerned about the article printed on October 14, "New Law Requires Colleges to Reveal Crime Statistics." This new law is only a small step in the right direction. The article quoted Hans Taala, chief of security for BYU Hawaii as saying, "Students become victims when they don't know the crime rates." No truer words were ever spoken. But let us look at all the crime rates. BYU is part of a community that extends beyond the borders of the campus.

For example, let us look at the rape statistics for 1991. BYU crime reports show there were no reported rapes. However, Provo crime reports show 41 reported rapes. This makes a lot more sense when we look at a few more statistics. First of all, 82 percent of rape victims in Utah County have met or known their attacker. Of these cases, 95 percent were committed in either the victim's or the rapist's home. Given the fact that almost 80 percent of the students attending BYU live off campus, it is obvious why these statistics do not appear in the campus crime report.

While I am aware that BYU's crime rate is way below the national average, it does not mean our campus is immune to these things. Do not base your sense of false security on the rosy picture portrayed by the campus crime report. Know what is happening in the entire community so you do not become a victim.

Time savers

To the editor:

I was glad to see that BYU finally clue and is now making a sidewalk and all the other conscientious natural beauty made a lovely through the lawn northeast of the You know, it was so inconvenient take the extra 15 seconds to walk sidewalk instead of through the down and half-dead grass of the especially when it was raining would ride my mountain bike through muddy quagmire, leaving sliding marks in the mud.

With a little luck, BYU will save down more of those white fence that I can save even more time they want us out of here in four the way, have you been over by front lawn lately? If we keep it there, too, we will soon be getting time-saving sidewalk. What else use our tuition money for, anyway?

BYU-Hawaii hires first female VP at an LDS school

Parse Services

BYU-Hawaii has appointed the first woman vice president in the history of the university education system of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

BYUH President Alton Wade announced the appointment of V. Napua Baker to the position of vice president of Institutional Advancement early this week. Baker is a native Hawaiian and a member of the LDS Church. She has been working as an administrative assistant to Wade, directing university relations since 1987.

V. NAPUA BAKER

Wade said Baker had been working for the past year or so as an assistant to the president, but has been performing the functions of a vice president.

Wade said that the Board of Trustees approved the change of position. Wade said, "and that they enthusiastically supported my recommendation that Napua fill the position."

Napua has proven her ability to work effectively with people, to make courageous and difficult decisions, to know when and when not to compromise and to be compassionate when it is needed," he said.

Born on Molokai and raised on Oahu, Baker graduated from Kamehameha School for Girls and attended BYUH when it was Church College of Hawaii.

She has been working as an administrative assistant to Wade, directing university relations since 1987.

"The purpose of Institutional Advancement (formerly University Relations) is to obtain awareness, create understanding and actively communicate with people the marvelous story of BYU-Hawaii," Baker said. "We tell our story through our graduates who go out and serve well, our faculty who are experts in their fields, and our excellent students, staff and administrators."

"As we let our light so shine before men, as written in Matthew, chapter 5, we will become a light unto the world that cannot be hid," she said.

Terminally ill patients may ask to avoid CPR

By IRENE CHEN
Universe Staff Writer

Utah paramedics will stop saving lives at the request of terminally ill patients if the Health Department Emergency Medical Services' "Do Not Resuscitate" legislation is passed.

Emergency Medical Services is drafting legislation to accommodate the number of terminally ill patients who opt not to be resuscitated once the heart stops beating, said Mike Mathieu, Ogden deputy fire chief and EMS Paramedic Advisory drafting committee head.

Mathieu said paramedics confront at least one case a month where patients choose to die without emergency resuscitation at home, but families panic and call 911. He said families call because they want someone to help the situation and don't realize paramedics are legally obligated to begin CPR.

"It's emotionally difficult when we can't honor the requests of the family," Mathieu said. "They say, 'No, don't do this. We don't want this.' How do we know that is the patient's wishes or that they're really family?"

Mathieu said paramedics have to decide what action to take within 15 seconds to avoid brain damage to the patient.

"Every nursing home in the country deals with this (decision)," said Dirk Anjewierden, Alta Care Center nursing home administrator. "Most of our terminally ill patients request not to be resuscitated."

Anjewierden said patients can file "do not resuscitate orders" through the care center, but that option is not available to those who receive care at home.

The Implied Consent Law states if a person is unconscious, it is assumed he or she would like help. If DNR legislation passes, terminally ill patients would sign documents establishing their wishes to refuse resuscitation, Mathieu said.

"We don't see this as helping someone to die," he said. "These patients are dying with little time."

In order to qualify as terminally ill, patients must be expected to die within a year and have a physician's order verifying everything has been done medically to save them, Mathieu said.

Mathieu said the legislation is based on Connecticut's DNR program.

Maria Wilson, EMS field services chief in Connecticut, said the goal of the program is to rapidly identify DNR patients.

Under the Connecticut law, patients accepted in the DNR program wear an orange and plaid bracelet to notify paramedics they do not want resuscitation. Patients can change their decision by cutting off the bracelet, but few ever do, Wilson said.

"Applying to the DNR program is not a sudden decision. These patients have already considered the facts," she said.

Wilson also said nurses counsel with families in the DNR program to help them develop a plan. Families must write a list of people to call when the patient dies to avoid sudden panic.

"Emergency medical (workers) don't see what happens to patients and family when a person deteriorates," Wilson said. "It's a traumatic experience."

WE NEVER FORGOT THAT THIS FINGER ALSO HAS A HEART AND A BRAIN.

Some jewelers act as if all prospective brides are blinded by love. Oh, some jewelers are courteous enough. A few are even quite friendly. But, some try passing off second-rate stones and rings, on the hope that the "stars" in couples eyes will keep them from discerning value from exaggeration. Not so at Wilson Diamonds. At this exciting, emotional time in your life, we want to help you think as clearly as you feel. That's why we'll teach you how to confidently shop for a diamond.

We'll even loan you "The Diamond Ring Buying Guide", which takes a comprehensive look at judging diamond and ring quality, and choosing a reliable jeweler. We'll also take you into our gem lab where you can examine in detail any of the hundreds of diamonds and rings we have available. You see, we believe you should select your spouse and your rings with your eyes wide open. It's only after marriage that you keep them half closed. (And be sure to visit your mother-in-law at least once a year.)
